practice, enhancing student readiness for employment.

Core Techniques in Swedish Institute Massage Therapy

Swedish Institute massage therapy primarily focuses on traditional Swedish massage techniques, known for their therapeutic benefits and client relaxation. These techniques form the foundation of the institute's teachings and are essential for any massage therapist's toolkit.

Effleurage

Effleurage involves long, gliding strokes that warm up the muscles and promote circulation. This technique is typically used at the beginning and end of a massage session to prepare tissues and soothe the client.

Petrissage

Petrissage consists of kneading and rolling movements that target deeper muscle layers. It helps release muscle tension, improve flexibility, and enhance blood flow, making it effective for addressing muscle stiffness.

Friction

Friction involves deep, circular movements that break down adhesions and scar tissue. This technique is useful for treating specific areas of chronic muscle tightness or injury recovery.

Tapotement

Tapotement includes rhythmic tapping or percussion movements that stimulate nerves and muscles. It can invigorate the body and is often used towards the end of a massage session.

Vibration

Vibration is a shaking or trembling motion applied to muscles to relax and loosen tissues. This technique enhances muscle relaxation and prepares the body for further therapeutic interventions.

- Petrissage – deep muscle kneading
- Friction – breaking down adhesions
