Their stories reveal a pattern of strength and divine calling, highlighting the significant contributions of female leaders in a predominantly patriarchal society.

Deborah: The Judge and Prophetess

Deborah stands as one of the most remarkable examples of women leadership in the Bible. Serving as both a judge and prophetess, Deborah led Israel during a time of conflict and oppression. women leadership in bible: Women, Leadership, and the Bible Natalie R. Wilson Eastman, 2014-05-16 What do you believe about women's roles in church leadership? women leadership in bible: The Quest for Gender Equity in Leadership KeumJu Jewel Hyun, Diphus Chosefu Chemorion, 2016-07-29 The call for gender equity in leadership has become a global concern. From a Christian perspective, all forms of gender prejudice are sinful because they violate God's intention for creating both men and women in God's image. Although many Christian authors have published books and journal articles to address gender-based injustice, very few publications have approached the subject from an African perspective. This book is meant to fill the existing gap. With a specific reference to the African context, this book explores the phenomenon of equity in leadership from various dimensions, such as African culture and traditional religion, church tradition, biblical interpretation, as well as from the perspective of contemporary socio-economic and political realities in Africa. By giving vivid examples of success stories of men and women working together, the authors have demythologized the view that women cannot be leaders. In addition, this book is intended for general readership by Christian men and women throughout the globe. For universities and colleges that teach gender studies as a subject, the book can serve as a class text or reference resource. Seminaries and theological institutions will also find it handy for training and mentoring Christians to promote equity in the church, ministry, business, and family.

women leadership in bible: Women's Rights and the Bible Richard H. Hiers, 2012-05-03 In this volume, Richard Hiers challenges the popular assumption that the Bible has a low view of women and that biblical law either ignores women or requires them to be subject and subservient to men. He does so by identifying and carefully examining hundreds of biblical texts and allowing them to speak for themselves. Among the findings: - that biblical tradition generally represents women positively, as strong and independent persons; - that no text represents wives as subject to their husbands and that no biblical law requires such subjection; - that biblical laws provide many protections for women's rights and interests--in several instances, rights equal to those enjoyed by men. The book focuses particularly on the Old Testament and Old Testament law, and argues that Old Testament laws and their underlying values provide important resources for Christian ethics and social policy today.

women leadership in bible: Growing Women in Ministry Anna R. Morgan, 2024-10-29 While many aspects of leadership development are similar for women and men, women face different cultural expectations and have different experiences than their male counterparts. Anna Morgan's own experiences in pastoral ministry leadership launched her search for a holistic way to grow the skills, influence, and authority of women who are gifted and called as leaders. This book provides a positive, comprehensive, research-based model for developing women in church and ministry leadership. Morgan identifies seven aspects of leadership development that form a woman over her lifetime. Three work inwardly as a woman grows in leadership: spiritual calling, giftedness, and emotional intelligence. Four work externally to shape her authority and influence: home life supports, ministry leadership contexts, leadership relationships, and communication. Growing Women in Ministry offers a new way to understand how women leaders are formed and how they rise to become influential leaders in positions of authority in churches and ministries. It is written in a clear, accessible style for both female ministry leaders and men seeking to promote female leaders. It includes policy suggestions, strategies, values for ideal growing conditions, and discussion questions, making it an ideal resource for ministry, practical theology, and leadership courses, church and parachurch leaders, and pastors.

women leadership in bible: Leadership and Calling Through the Prism of Scripture Fred Wantante Settuba-Male, Gia R. Tatone, 2023-10-28 This volume offers phenomenological studies that examine the lived experiences of biblical leaders, emphasizing external summons and a prosocial intention while offering suggestions for future research. Part 1 focuses on various aspects of divine calling and leadership, covering topics such as the calling of biblical prophets like Jeremiah and Samuel, and the downfall of Solomon. Part 2 explores successful biblical leadership and followership from a qualitative, phenomenological lens, analyzing the experiences of Abraham, Paul, and Samson. Part 3 presents both positive and negative portrayals of biblical leadership, demonstrating how both types can lead to social justice outcomes. Presenting a Christian perspective of the relationship between the leaders and their sense of calling, this book employs a phenomenological approach to investigate the significance of various aspects of God's calling, such as the leader's discernment of the calling, predictors of a leader's calling, the social- cultural influences of the calling, the relationship between personality traits and calling, and the evolution of a leader's calling. This book will contribute to scholarly discussions related to meaningful work, workplace satisfaction, employee engagement, and responsible leadership.

women leadership in bible: Collaboration of Women's and Men's Leadership Edith Khakasa Chemorion, 2023-02-24 Moving from Hegemony to Partnership in Leadership When God created women and men, the intention was for them to be partners with each other and to serve in the world as cocreators with God. The story of human beings, however, has been impacted with culture and other social factors to create different forms of hegemonies. These hegemonies have been key in values that create social injustices that are in all spheres of life but more so in women and men relationships. In cases of leadership and in many cultures, men have adopted attitudes that justify exclusion of women from leadership. In religious circles, it is justified by the ways texts are read and interpreted through the lens of culture. If we begin from the premises of justice and believing in a God of justice, then hegemonic ways of understating leadership should be null and void.

Acknowledging that human beings are created in the image and likeness of God demands that we act differently. What this has meant is to challenge injustice in leadership by men and women in partnership. The circle of concerned African women theologians in Africa, where Rev. Edith Chemorion is a member, has, over the years, provided safe spaces for mentoring women to research and write about the experiences of women but much more so to call for justice in all areas, including the study of theological education and for leadership in the churches. This has borne results because of the partnership of men and women. Reverend Edith's rallying call is that society moves from hegemony to partnership in all fronts, but especially in offering leadership by all. We are strong when we partner, and we image God's will for society in partnership. Prof. Esther Mombo Lecturer, Faculty of Theology St. Paul's University, Limuru, Kenya women leadership in bible: Law, Religion and Leadership in Africa F. Sibanda, E. Chitando, E.G. Konyana, B.P. Humbe, 2025-05-16 In Africa, some heads of state sometimes prefer to take their oath on the Bible or the Quran rather than on an ancestral law or a fearsome fetish capable of causing misery in the event of a violation. Thus, in order to build credible institutions that can guarantee socio-political and economic stability, it is desirable to resort to certain ancestral practices, in particular strict respect for customs. At this level of our reflection, it seems useless for Africans to reinvent the wheel; rather, we must look in the rearview mirror in order to exalt the pre-colonial instruments capable of unravelling the invisible mystery of these societies. In this same dynamic, the ancestral law, because of its historical and charismatic legitimacy, imposes strict respect for the cosmic order. Komoé Guy-Roland Kossonou Assistant Professor, Legal, Administrative and Management Sciences Training and Research Unit (UFR-SJAG) Alassane Ouattara University, Bouaké, Côte d'Ivoire There is no way the church leadership can ignore such issues, which affect their people daily, and only talk about the future kingdom to come. Both the sacred and the secular kingdoms are important matters in the life of people in every community, hence religious and political leaders should strive to resolve their conflicts because people look up to them for spiritual and political leadership. When political leaders tell religious leaders to stick to preaching the gospel and not involve themselves in the political affairs of the country, it silences the church's ability to speak for the poor. Upendo Mwakasenga Ordained minister, United Church of Zambia; Doctoral student in systematic theology, University of Kwa-Zulu Natal Even today, religio-cultural beliefs inform the way the youths are viewed within Zimbabwe's political circles. Such beliefs infantilize young people and disempower them from effective political participation. In most cases, this role is postponed into the future. The existing political structures and regimes exploit youth to expend their energies as political and military foot soldiers for the political elite, but they are not being mentored to be prepared for positions of leadership. . . It, therefore, becomes crucial to question the maxim "the future is young", which seems to procrastinate youth political leadership in Zimbabwe. Molly Manyonganise Senior Lecturer, Department of Religious Studies and Philosophy, Zimbabwe Open University Ultimately, God provides and heals, but the fisherman must still cast his net, the farmer must still till the soil and the doctor must still administer medication. It is no different in matters of governance, military warfare, or institution building. Personal piety is inconsequential to the empirical workings of the world, but it may weigh on the scales in the hereafter. The Brotherhood's fatalism blinds them to the worldly instruments needed to govern a nation. Study and experience in economic policy and statecraft cannot be replaced with saintly endeavours, such as worship and charity. Nabil Yasien Mohamed Lecturer in Islamic Studies, Department of Religion and Theology, University of the Western Cape
