The primary goal is to measure how well students understand phonemic awareness, spelling patterns, and morphological elements within words. By providing a clear picture of individual strengths and weaknesses, the assessment supports differentiated instruction that meets diverse learning needs.

Developmental Spelling Stages

The words your way assessment categorizes student spelling and word knowledge into distinct developmental stages, ranging from emergent to derivational relations stages. Components and Structure of the Assessment

The words your way assessment comprises several components designed to evaluate different aspects of word knowledge. These components include spelling inventories, word sorts, and phonics pattern recognition tasks. Together, they provide a comprehensive picture of a student's word study abilities and developmental stage.

Spelling Inventory

At the core of the words your way assessment is the spelling inventory, which asks students to spell a list of words that increase in complexity. This inventory targets phonetic skills, orthographic patterns, and morphological knowledge, allowing educators to analyze error patterns and developmental spelling features.

Word Sorts and Pattern Recognition

Word sorts are an interactive component that helps assess students' ability to categorize words based on spelling patterns, sounds, or meanings. This activity highlights a student's understanding of phonics rules and morphological structures. Pattern recognition tasks further evaluate proficiency in identifying common linguistic features within words.

Vocabulary and Morphology Tasks

2. Present the spelling inventory words one at a time, allowing students to write down their responses.
3. Conduct word sorts or pattern recognition tasks as appropriate for the grade level.
4. Record responses carefully for later analysis.

words your way assessment: Assessing Students, Not Standards Lee Ann Jung, 2024-05-23 See beyond content standards to the broader context of life-changing skills. The standards-based learning and grading movement of the past twenty years has ushered in a critical shift in assessment that demands clarity in both what is being measured and how well students are learning. Seeing the value in this evolution, a wave of schools has invested enormous effort to institutionalize the policy and practices of the movement. In doing so, many focused their initial efforts squarely on grading and fell short of the more important work-classroom assessment. There are important lessons in these missteps and failures. This groundbreaking, next generation approach to classroom assessment challenges educators to reflect on the connections between growth, mastery, and student self-efficacy and to prioritize the transferable skills of metacognition and self-regulation in assessments. A powerful call-to-action, this guide includes: A conceptual framework that guides the questions and order of assessment reform An approach to assessment, grading, and reporting that prioritizes student growth over a standard definition of success for everyone Strategies to develop metacognition and catalyze motivation in students Orientation to each chapter with learning intentions with success criteria Vivid case stories and prompts to power deep reflection Underscoring the importance of learning environments that work for the full range of learning profiles, this book calls for a revolution in the narrative around assessment and grading, emphasizing the ultimate goal of nurturing students who are metacognitive, expert learners, motivated by the joy of learning.
